

NATIONAL CENTRE FOR PERSONS WITH DISABILITIES CELEBRATES 53 YEARS ON DECEMBER 5th 2017

We are proud to announce that we have crossed another milestone in the history of our Centre. On the 5th of December, 2017 the National Centre for Persons with Disabilities shall complete 53 years of continued services to persons with disabilities. We take this occasion to thank each of you for being an earnest part of NCPD.

We are pleased to recognize and acknowledge all those who have contributed to our success. Looking back on the years gone by, we could not have done it without you, even if we tried. We are grateful to our loyal membership, sponsors, supporters, Board Members past and present who trusted in us to provide immaculate services and products. Their demands, challenges and feedbacks have pushed us to go ahead and improve vigorously. Our success story remains incomplete without the support of our trainees, clients and customers. Not only have they made us a part of their lives but also helped us reach out to the nation. They spread the word faster and in a better way than any of our promotional means could. We plan to keep our organisation and relation growing with you and continue to provide you with nothing less than the best. With your support, we wish to explore new heights in the coming year.

The initial idea began with three medical doctors (Robertson, the guru, Gunness, the mover and shaker; and Collymore, the idealist) – who began to lobby for a place where polio victims and others with physical handicaps could develop skills, continue their schooling and find purpose in their lives.

At NCPD professionals have always been at the forefront pushing the boundaries of ‘what if’ and ‘why not’ to improve our collective well-being. Innovation, in essence, is about crafting new ideas to improve the way we do things. It is about seeing things differently, and imagining that which could be. For instance, where would we be if Dr Collymore and his team had not persevered with their ideas pertaining to persons with disabilities and disability issues in 1964?

Today we thank you all for the contributions you have made to our organization over the last 53 years. We look forward to your continued support.
